

LECTURE

“Trafficking in Women: A Global Challenge in a Regional Context”

Thursday, Feb. 3rd, 2011

11:00 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.

FIU—Modesto A. Maidique Campus
Graham Center—GC 243

Emek Ucarer

*Associate Professor of International Relations
Chair, Dept. of International Relations
Bucknell University*

Emek M. Uçarer is Associate Professor of International Relations at Bucknell University. She holds a Ph.D. from the University of South Carolina. Her research interests include cooperation on immigration and asylum matters in the European Union, the role of EU institutions in cooperation, nongovernmental organizations in global and regional governance, human trafficking and smuggling, and political mobilization of ethnic diasporas in host countries. Her recent publications include “Safeguarding Asylum as a Human Right: NGOs and the European Union,” in Multi-Level Governance and Civil Society: Comparing the Role of NGOs in the United Nations and the European Union (Jutta Joachim and Birgit Locher, eds., New York: Routledge 2009), “Negotiating Third-Country National Rights in the European Union,” in Diversity in the European Union (Elisabeth Prügl and Markus Thiel, eds., New York: Palgrave 2009), “Burden-Shirking, Burden-Shifting, and Burden-Sharing in the Emergent European Asylum Regime” in International Politics (2006), “The External Impact of European Integration: The Case of Immigration Policies,” (with Sandra Lavenex) in Cooperation and Conflict (2004). She has served as an in-service trainee at the European Commission.

► RSVP by Jan. 31st to calyc@fiu.edu

Sponsored by:

The Miami-Florida European Union Center of Excellence
The Women’s Studies Center
Department of History Graduate Student Association (DOHGSA)

