Black Lives Matter: The Movement in Europe

Tuesday, November 15, 2016 | 12:00 PM - 1:30 PM | FIU Modesto A. Maidique Campus | GL 156

The Black Lives Matter movement in the U.S. has struck a chord in Europe with some. Issues of procedural inequalities and police violence have been made more public through Black Lives Matter marches in cities throughout Europe. How does the movement in Europe differ from its American inspiration? How do issues of ethnicity and religion inform understandings of race in Europe? And what has been the response of authorities?

Moderated by: Dr. Waverly Duck, associate professor of sociology, University of Pittsburgh

Panelists:

- Dr. Felix German, assistant professor, Africana Studies, University of Pittsburgh
- Toyin Agbetu, community educator, United Kingdom
- Dr. Kehinde Andrews, associate professor, Birmingham City University
